Andrew believes that everyone has the capacity for positive change, and that people really matter. He sees the potential in everyone and believes that coaching can help pretty much anyone make positive changes in their lives.

His has a calm, intuitive, supportive yet challenging (and sometime playful) approach to working with others, and has a knack of distilling and summarising ideas, and helping people 'make sense of things'.

His time as a senior leader in the UK and overseas has given him a deep understanding of the challenges of leadership and what makes engaging learning.

Andrew is a fully trained Co-Active® professional coach and an accredited member of the International Coach Federation. He has been using coaching as a senior leader for over 15 year and now coaches professionals from many walks of life.

Focusing on what you want to achieve, Andrew will work actively with you to design a bespoke program that meets your needs.

As a leadership development facilitator, he has designed and delivered leadership development programs at middle and senior leadership levels including internationally accredited leadership development programs.

When not coaching or facilitating, Andrew likes to go 'walkabout' and is learning to speak Australian.

For his family and him - the beach is 'our happy place'
